CASTILLA LA MANCHA

The region

Castilla-La Mancha, sometimes called Castilla La Nueva, is the heartland of Spain, a vast, high plateau that, to the first time visitor, can appear bleak, harsh, and even hostile. Five provinces—Cuenca, Ciudad Real, Albacete, Guadalajara, and Toledo (the capital)—make up this large region, best known as home of the Castilian “knight” Don Quixote de la Mancha and the windmills at which he so memorably tilted.

This big-sky country, rolling plains and low hills with temperatures that can be extreme, ranging from well below freezing in winter to a searing 43 degrees centigrade in summer. It's a great terrain for cereal crops and sheep, not so great for high- quality olive oil or wine, but the real secret of Castilla-La Mancha is the growth of these two products in the last dozen or so years. After a long period of neglect, manchego has in recent years been brought back to its authentic original character.

There are four fundamental assets in our gastronomy: World famous queso manchego (manchego cheese), the unifying and definite element of our region, is based on sheep-milk and farmhouse elaboration, with strict quality control checks that will guarantee its quality and authenticity; Golden Manchego saffron also brings renown to the region, as does DO Manchego, a cheese that Don Quixote enjoyed and that defines Spain today in the way parmigiano defines Italy. After a long period of neglect, manchego has in recent years been brought back to its authentic original character. The exploitation of natural products such as vegetables, pulses, fruits and garden products, including our outstanding olive oils; Abundant and high quality game hunting (big and small) of its numerous preserves; And finally, marvelous wines: red, white, claret, rosé, light, strong, dense, all to match each person's taste and the food they go with.

WINES FROM CASTILLA-LA MANCHA

It may come as a surprise to learn that Castilla-La Mancha is also home to important vineyards. In fact, DO La Mancha is the largest wine region in Spain. Traditionally seen only as a high-volume producer of wines, Castilla-La Mancha has adapted modern vinification techniques to produce clean, stable wines, especially in the much sought-after international-style. Fresh, crisp, delicately fruity whites and more complex, mature reds are well worth seeking out, as wine lovers increasingly discover. All told, there are nine controlled denominations (PDO or DO in Spanish), the most familiar to many being La Mancha, Valdepeñas and Vino de la Tierra de Castilla (Landwine).

HOW TO IDENTIFY WINES FROM CASTILLA-LA MANCHA

In the label of your wine bottle you can find one of the following logos of the DO (PDO) or Vino de la Tierra:

D.O. ALMANSA, “SENSES EXALTATION”

The denomination of origin of Almansa was founded in 1966. During this period a large number of wineries disappeared for various reasons, leaving wine producing in the area in the hands of just a few wineries and cooperatives. Over the past couple of years several new wineries have been created. Joining forces with the older and more established wineries they have maintained the D.O. Almansa since its creation, raising over the years awareness internationally of this privileged area that produces unique and high quality Spanish wines.

Wine producing in this area started in the 16th Century. Since then, Almansa has constantly cultivated vineyards and produced wine.

An average height of 750 meters above the sea, a predominantly continental climate, land with low fertility and a rainfall of less than 350 mm per year offer the perfect terroir for low yields, resulting in high quality grapes and great concentration of color and aroma.

Nowadays the D.O. Almansa is focusing its efforts on two key native grapes of the region. Firstly it is focusing on the cultivation of the Garnacha Tintorera grape variety, the most cultivated native grape from this area that, until recently, was only used to complement other wines given its intense color and excellent structure. Single varietal wines are now being made from Garnacha Tintorera that are being bottled and exported successfully to countries in North America, Europe, Asia and South America. The second key native grape of the D.O. Almansa is Monastrell. These native grapes have recently been complemented by the cultivation of Syrah vines, which have adapted perfectly to the terroir of Almansa.

Using these native grapes and the adaptation of local wineries to new technologies and modern winemaking techniques has paved the way for the elaboration of excellent wines.

Nowadays, the wines produced by the wineries of the D.O. Almansa include new Spanish and international varietals, resulting in more complex and unique wines. The last couple of harvests have seen these traditional dry wines complemented by special red sweet wines and fresh dry white wines too.

The D.O. Almansa is currently formed by 12 wineries, with a total average annual production of 5.2 million bottles, which are now enjoyed by wine lovers in more than 30 international markets.

The potential of the D.O. Almansa for producing high quality unique wines will result over time in both national and international recognition of this wine region and of the wineries that it represents.

Description

1991 began the journey of Bodegas Centro Españolas, a family state winery that became the first "Chateau" style winery in Castilla-La Mancha, combining the most avant-garde technology with the traditional arts of our land. Our project is based on an intensive work of our vineyards by our winemakers, to extract the essence of our different varieties and terroirs. Tradition and innovation come together in Bodegas Allozo Centro Españolas, as well as our winemakers team formed by Miguel Angel Valentín, father and son, both biologists and vocation winemakers and great world of wine lovers. Miguel Angel Valentín Díaz, after 10 years of technical manager in Rioja, was the promoter of the Allozo Project and a visionary of viticulture in Castilla-La Mancha with the introduction of foreign varieties, the making of coupages and long time crianzas, besides the study of the Terroir for the great wines production. Bodegas Allozo Centro Españolas has 250 Ha family stated vineyard. Located in the Tomelloso area, between 650-680 meters above sea level, which are surrounding the winery where we can differentiate plots by age, variety and by different kind of soil, which will be worked during the year and harvested depending on the kind of wine that our winemakers seek to make.

Description

"Many years ago, our ancestors used to produce wine in clay barrels, transforming sugar into alcohol and turning grape juice in wine.

Bodegas Romero de Ávila Salcedo is one of the few wineries in the world that can still elaborate wine in clay amphora's deposits, as Romans did over 2000 years ago.

Our winery is proud to offer a very special wine, different from everything already existing in the wine art.

Description

EL PROGRESO is the oldest Winemaking Cooperative Company in Spain with uninterrupted activity from its initiation.

It was founded in 1917, exactly March 3rd, thanks to the hard work of a small group of farmers concerned about the lack of fair opportunities to process and commercialize their products. It was then established as an agricultural union, and it meant a decent outing to the hard job of farmers that usually felt like they were bound hand and foot when trying to get a fair value for their work. The number of initial associates increased, and the Cooperative obtained better and better results. Thus, after 50 years of activity, in 1967, EL PROGRESO faced a great change that turned it into one of the greatest cooperative companies of its time: Merging with two agricultural Cooperative companies existing in Villarrubia de los Ojos, (La Manchega and La Labradora). Now, after almost one century of tireless labour, we continue with the same spirit of work that initiated this adventure. Many things have changed, for better, until we have created one of the most thriving and prosper industries in the country, but one thing has always been kept through the years: Passion for our land and our fruits, for our people, and a well done job, a legacy from our ancestors.

Description

Encomienda de Cervera is located in the heart of the Massif Volcanic of Calatrava Estate, at an altitude between 750 and 850 meters above sea level, towards the end of the noble and cultural city of Almagro that borders with Sierra de Arzollar and the Cañada Real Soriana, among valleys and hills covered with oak trees and junipers, rosemary, thyme, and much more. There is the view of black soil of volcanic origin and red ochre (Almagre) that, according to some historians, give the city of Almagro its name, as well as limestones and rocky areas. All of it located under the detailed watch of the Maar de la Hoya de Cervera Volcano, declared Natural Monument in 1993, and still waters from one the main currents of the Guadiana river, the Jabalón river. Encomienda de Cervera Estate was created in 1758 as a result of the merger among Hacienda de Cervera, Cañada de Zentinar, Heredad de Vilena, Hoya de la Cruz and Coto del Marqués de Cervera. Later, Barranco del Puerco, native of Mesa Maestral of Calatrava Estate, joins the merger with 1,200 hectares. Back then, the estate already had olive groves with two thousand three hundred and seventy five olive trees, an oil press, a country house, and a grove with about ten thousand black and white poplars. At the end of the XIX Century, there was a 22 hectare vineyard and a 200,000 liter winery.

Description

Hacienda El Espino is located in the geographical area covered by the Denominación de Origen Almansa. It is situated on a high plateau that borders the autonomous regions of Valencia and Murcia along what is known as the Almansa Corridor. The corridor has, for centuries, marked the transition from the lands of Levante (coastal regions) to Castilla.

Description

Born and raised in scenic Montealegre del Castillo (Albacete) in 1950 to a wine producing family, all my life I have been living close to the land and to the world of wine. At the age of 12 my father passed away and I inherited the family's modest vineyard. Thanks to the profits from the vineyard and supplemental agricultural production, I was able to put myself through college and attain a degree in Pharmacy.

As time passed my passion for my ancestral home and its innate beauty led me to purchase old vineyards and establishing new ones near and around the original location.

In 1994, filled with more enthusiasm than possibilities, I acquired Santa Rosa. A spectacular estate, Santa Rosa features an eighteenth century colonial manor filled with the splendour of a by gone era. Located between Almansa and Montealegre del Castillo, it is well within the limits of the Almansa denomination of origin. It is advantageously nestled near vineyards, olive groves and grain, creating the perfect conditions to cultivate a 100% organic product.

In 2001, the historic estate was faithfully restored to original its original condition, in keeping with its protected national heritage architectural status

Description

The Bodega Santa Cruz de Alpera was founded in 1947 by 25 winegrowers. Their goal was to create a winery to elaborate their own wines and this journey leads us to today. After more than 60 years of experience and with larger vineyards and totally modernized facilities, we face new challenges ahead. We aim to keep the cooperative identity; our winery offers unique products due to grow a single variety, Garnacha Tintorera. With about 3,000 hectares cultivated, more than a third in organic farming, the winery meets markets in several countries.

Description

BODEGAS CANO was founded by Blas Garcia Cano in 1860. Currently, it is the 5th generation of this family that with the family legacy, and adding a careful production system under the highest quality standards are placing on the market a wine production of the most demanding palates level under the Name of Origin Almansa. We are in Higuera (Albacete), great wine tradition area, situated at 1000 meters altitude, with calcareous and very shallow soils, which results in low yields of selected and high quality grapes.

Climate is continental, with little precipitation. Winters are cold and summers are hot during the day, but winds from the Mediterranean Sea goes down temperatures at night. This generates a thermal contrast that favors optimal ripening, resulting in a highly concentrated grapes in tannins and polyphenols.

In sum, this soil and so extreme climatic conditions make our area a prime location for growing grapes, and especially for the expression of Garnacha Tintorera, our main range.

Description

Our wines evoke our land and our people: fresh, young, friendly, with a distinctive personality. They evoke cold winter days shared with friends and family around the fire. They evoke local celebrations, festivals, parties, that always involve sharing wine between friends both new and old. They evoke hot summers and spending holidays sitting around the table chatting long after the meal has ended. Garnacha Tintorera is our indigenous grape variety. It has a uniquely colourful and fleshy pulp that produces an intense red juice. The wines of Tintoralba, made from the Garnacha Tintorera grape, are surprisingly unique: unexpected, intense, and with a ripe fruit character that truly sets them apart. They inundate the palate with notes of black pepper, black olive, dark chocolate, red fruits, licorice, and a subtle herbaceousness, all resulting in a wine that is both refreshing and smooth.
